Native

Native art and culture flourishes here due to the large population of Native Alaskans. The three indigenous Pacific Northwest Indian tribes are the Tlingit, Haida and Tsimshian. Gaze at the many massive totem poles, timeless monuments in cedar from the first Alaskans. Native dance comes alive with regular performances by skilled groups, just minutes from Ketchikan, at the Saxman Tribal house, and at the Metlakatla Long House. Two miles south from Ketchikan is Saxman Village. Its totem park includes the famed Abraham Lincoln pole. Following in the footsteps of their ancestors, carvers and their apprentices can be seen here sculpting totem poles, canoes, paddles and masks. In a beautiful cove eight miles north of Ketchikan is Totem Bight State Park, where a historic collection of totems and a Native community house can be viewed. Ketchikan's Totem Heritage Center displays a large collection of original poles retrieved from abandoned village sites and hosts classes teaching traditional art forms like weaving and regalia making. The Southeast Alaska Discovery Center houses contemporary poles, examples of Native basketry and other crafts; and a traditional Native fish camp exhibit. Fine totemic art can be seen at the Prince of Wales Island communities of Kasaan, Klawock and Hydaburg.

Native Culture Itinerary Ideas

The Ketchikan area is home to three tribes of Northwest Coast Indians: the Tlingit, Haida and Tsimshian. Examples of traditional NW coast art abound throughout Ketchikan. Totems and other cedar carvings are easy to spot in parks and green spaces, and adorn local homes, commercial and public buildings.

- ▶ Day One: The Southeast Alaska Discovery Center's Native Traditions room provides a good introduction to the area's indigenous peoples. At the Totem Heritage Center, view original totems on display following their retrieval from abandoned Native Villages; just across the creek the Deer Mountain Tribal Hatchery and Eagle Center rears salmon and maintains a live eagle display. Locations for totems and carvings throughout the downtown area are noted on the walking tour map available at the Ketchikan Visitors Bureau.
- ▶ Day Two: Take an organized or self guided tour to Totem Bight State Park and to Saxman Native Village. Both parks feature clan houses and large collections of poles. Saxman's carving shed allows visitors to watch master carvers and their apprentices practice their craft near the clan house where Native dance performances are held.
- ▶ Day Three: Fly or ferry to Metlakatla, the only Indian reservation in the state, and home to the Tsimshian tribe. Activities include Native dance performances, artist demonstrations, refreshments and a community tour.
- ▶ Options: Plan enough time to see our neighboring communities. In Wrangell, Ketchikan's neighbor to the north, visit Chief Shakes Island and photograph the ancient rock carvings scattered throughout Petroglyph Beach State Historic Park. On Prince of Wales Island, totem pole collections can be viewed in the communities of Hyدابurg and Klawock.

Wildlife

Wildlife sightings are an everyday experience here and a visit to Ketchikan offers many options for viewing. Majestic Bald eagles abound, and are easy to spot perched in shoreline trees and even atop church steeples with advantageous views. In season find them near salmon spawning streams and nesting areas. The variety of land and sea birds in the region will keep birders busy. Of special note is the Stikine River area in Wrangell, a haven for over 120 migrating species of bird in the spring and fall.

Black bear are common throughout the region, along with brown (grizzly) bears in mainland areas. Boaters and hikers sight them often, especially in Misty Fiords National Monument and on Prince of Wales Island. Some of the finest black and brown bear viewing locations in Alaska are at Anan Creek near Wrangell and at Salmon Creek in Hyder.

Sitka black-tailed deer almost pose for cameras on beaches, and along roadsides and trails. Mountain goats are plentiful, wolf may be sighted and moose range the mainland. Sightings of Orca and Humpback whales, sea lions, seals, playful sea otters and porpoise may be enjoyed on cruise excursions and from state ferries. Marten, mink and river otter can be seen along beaches, streams and lakefronts.

Ketchikan is located in the heart of the 17 million-acre Tongass National Forest, the largest in the United States. Designated for multiple use, the Tongass is managed by the US Forest Service for recreation and wilderness activities, wildlife habitat and resource based industry- primarily timber, fishing, tourism and mining. The Tongass is an integral part of the visitor experience and resident lifestyle in Southeast Alaska.

The resources of the Tongass provide the means for a unique way of life. Native tribes harvested wood to build long houses and canoes and create household implements and art. Spruce roots provided valuable weaving material, while the vegetation and animals living in the forest provided food, dyes and medicinal remedies.

Later settlers also found the Tongass a rich source of premium wood- Red and Yellow Cedar, Western Hemlock (far superior to the more commonly known Eastern Hemlock), and Sitka Spruce, prized for it's strength to weight ratio.

The timber industry's development in Southeast Alaska created small communities within the forest. A highlight of logging camp social life were "timber carnivals" or logging shows where woodsmen would compete in ax throwing, tree climbing, and obstacle course competitions that were patterned after the types of skills needed to work in the woods.

Visitors will experience the Tongass in a number of ways. In and around Ketchikan, you will "visit" the Tongass while cruising along its shores aboard ships, ferries, pleasure boats and kayaks. Other options for exploring the forest include several day hikes and trails for all abilities (see trail map on page 23). Fly or hike into a remote lake for a stay at a wilderness cabin. Camp and picnic at a recreation area. Outside of Hyder near Stewart, BC you can stop along the road to view a glacier. As you plan your visit, it will be apparent that the Tongass plays a large role in much of what you will see and do in Southeast Alaska.

Forestry Facts

- ▶ The Tongass encompasses 17 million acres (roughly the size of West Virginia) and dominates about 90% of Southeast Alaska.
- ▶ During World War I, spruce logs were commissioned by the military for building aircraft and in WWII for gliders, due to the wood's strength. Howard Hughes' famous "Spruce Goose" was crafted of Sitka Spruce.
- ▶ 145 wilderness cabins throughout the Tongass are available for public use, 80 are accessible from Ketchikan.
- ▶ The forest has an accelerated rate of growth compared to other forests, due to the unique climatic conditions of the temperate rain forest.
- ▶ Glaciers or "rivers of ice" found throughout the Tongass, often move at rate of 1-2 inches per day.
- ▶ If traveling through Southeast Alaska, you could visit Ketchikan, Wrangell, Petersburg, Juneau, Sitka, Haines, Skagway and Yakutat and never leave the Tongass.

Misty Fjords Itinerary Ideas

The geographical features of the area contribute to its scenic beauty and can be explored from below ground to above the mountain tops.

- ▶ Day Two: Misty Fjords National Monument, retreating glaciers have carved what many refer to as a northern equivalent of the Grand Canyon. Tour by boat, plane or both.
- ▶ Day Two: On Prince of Wales Island, El Capitan cave is part of a vast karst network discovered just a decade ago. Artifacts show evidence of human occupancy over 9,500 years ago and grizzly bear bones dated 30,000 years old. Managed by the US Forest Service, guided tours can be arranged in advance.
- ▶ Day Two: Glaciers. Explore several within easy travel of Ketchikan. Hyder, Alaska on the British Columbia border is home to the Salmon and Bear Glaciers, easily accessible by road. Wrangell and Petersburg offer outstanding viewing opportunities along the Stikine River and at LeConte Glacier.
- ▶ Day Two: Kayak through Misty Fjords, camping in nearby USFS cabins or on the beach. Bare boat charters allow exploration at your own pace around the numerous islands in the area. Raft down the Stikine River; or explore a wilderness-hiking trail leading to campsites, even hot springs.

Misty Fjords

Magnificent Misty Fjords National Monument is a pristine masterpiece. Its fjords were created by massive glacier action in the ice-rimmed wilderness. Here is one of the country's greatest treasures and some of Alaska's most spectacular scenery. Its 2.3 million acres include soaring cliffs, saw-tooth ridges shrouded in mists, sky-blue lakes, hanging valleys, countless waterfalls, bottomless saltwater fjords, and miles of glaciers. And the monument is home to a multitude of wildlife.

Misty Fjords' roadless location is accessed only by floatplane or boat from Ketchikan. It's possible to cruise in 3 hours one way, fly in (35 minutes one way), or choose to cruise one way and fly the other. Excursion vessels will carry your kayak to and from Misty Fjords, where you can paddle the pristine waters from a campsite or one of the U.S. Forest Service Cabins.

Fjords

Cruise passengers can see old pictographs (Native rock art) painted along the walls within the monument, drink from fjord waterfalls, enjoy relaxed cruising while watching for shore side wildlife, and see famous New Eddystone Rock, a picturesque volcanic core. Floatplanes provide a bird's-eye view of the entire locale and land on an alpine lake, so passengers can absorb the serenity and astonishing beauty.

Huge runs of salmon migrate from the open ocean, around Prince of Wales Island, and into the protected waters of the Inside Passage near Ketchikan. This mass gathering of five species of Pacific salmon is the reason that this area is known as the "Salmon Capital of the World". This region of Alaska is particularly noted for its strong runs of trophy size fish, including king (chinook), silver (coho), red (sockeye), pink (humpy), and chum (dog) salmon. The finest salt water fishing for giant halibut, red snapper, ling cod and rock cod is also available.

Numerous wilderness lakes and streams provide incredible fishing for steelhead, dolly varden, grayling, rainbow and cutthroat trout. The fighting spirit of these native species is enough to satisfy the most demanding angler. Fly fishing in these remote areas is excellent.

Ketchikan and neighboring Prince of Wales Island offer an outstanding variety of fishing experiences. First class lodges and resorts will

Things to Do

- ▶ Rotary Beach, 3 miles south of town, features a wading area, plenty of sand and a playground.
- ▶ Ketchikan is located in a temperate rainforest, showers and drizzle are frequent and so natural to local kids that they take it for granted. Sports events are rarely called due to rain, kids just dress accordingly and take it in stride. Bring rain-proof outerwear and shoes for your kids and let them enjoy the rain (and the puddles) too.
- ▶ For longer visits, kids may enjoy swimming at the local public pools or an afternoon at the Indoor Recreation Center, featuring indoor basketball, raquetball, air hockey, fitness rooms and craft programs.
- ▶ Totem Bight and Settler's Cove state parks offer regularly scheduled programs for kids with hands on activities by trained park personnel.
- ▶ Local special events including parades, festivals, concerts and theatre performances are often appropriate for all ages.

Families traveling to Ketchikan will find our community very kid-friendly. Ketchikan's population is largely made up of families, whom you're sure to see at work and play when you visit. Much of what serves to attract adult visitors to our area will be fun and educational for younger travelers as well.

Ketchikan's busy waterfront, with cruise ships, ferries, fishing boats, tugs and barges, float planes, kayaks and pleasure boats cruising by provides an almost non-stop parade of sights and sounds. Pick up a Ketchikan walking tour map and let the kids help navigate your route past salmon spawning creeks and a fish ladder, totem poles, local parks, busy fishing harbors, our unique 'stair streets' and historic buildings. Area attractions along the way include museums, a fish hatchery and eagle center as well as shops and eateries for a quick break or snack.

Local sightseeing tour options range from buses (including a double-decker) and more intimate van tours to street cars, a '57 Chevy or a horse drawn trolley. Explore the surrounding area onboard day cruise vessels, during a fishing charter or experience the aerial views from a float plane tour.

The entire family will enjoy a visit to one of Ketchikan's public beaches, particularly during low tide. The inter-tidal areas abound with fascinating sea life, shells and rocks. Gulls, eagles and sea otters reside close by, and occasionally a pod of whales will be spotted offshore.

Ketchikan's rich Native cultural presence offers opportunities to view traditional clan houses, totem collections and to see carvers in action. Or take the kids fishing, Ketchikan's bountiful waters are home to numerous species of fresh and salt water fish. Most activities can easily accommodate children, and some offer discounts for younger participants.

AND EVENTS

Ketchikan offers an exciting array of activities and special events. Designated one of the "Top 100 Small Arts Communities in the United States", Ketchikan hosts arts themed festivals and special events throughout the year. The Ketchikan Arts Guide, available locally, provides information on museums, galleries, performances and other arts outlets in the community.

Workshops and lectures offer learning opportunities in traditional native and classical art forms, natural and local history and science. Athletes will enjoy events like the Totem to Totem run or the annual triathlon. Bare boat rentals from skiffs to yachts allow you to set your own pace.

Local tours range from comfortable coaches to tour the city, to self guided bike and car rentals or choose a unique trolley or even amphibious craft. The Ketchikan Visitors Bureau offers an extensive collection of information. Pick up a copy of the walking tour map or check our calendar of events for a list of things to see and do while in town. Be sure to visit our tour center to choose from dozens of activities ranging from fishing charters to guided tours. Hunting is available for deer, bear, mountain goat and waterfowl.

Ketchikan features an enticing variety of restaurants from which to choose. Alaska is famous for fresh seafood such as: salmon, halibut, crab, shrimp, oysters and clams. These delicacies are fresh from the icy cold waters of the Pacific Ocean. Enjoy our local favorites: creamy seafood chowders, crab and shrimp tossed into omelets, salads or sandwiches; salmon, cod or halibut smoked, sautéed, broiled, battered, baked in an elegant sauce or in traditional fish and chips. Try a salmon burger or salmon jerky- deliciously different from the beef versions. Gather beach asparagus, berries, seaweed and Hudson's Bay Tea leaves—all traditional Native foods. Rest assured that your hometown favorites, from hearty steaks to pizza and fast foods to a country style breakfast are also available. Your favorite beverages are available too whether you crave a latté and biscotti, or are interested in trying an Alaskan brand brew. Choose from casual or formal dining settings. Restaurants, cafés, snack bars, and dining rooms at area resorts and lodges offer variety or plan a picnic by stopping at a deli for a savory meal to go.

You'll find that Ketchikan plays host to a wide spectrum of sourdough entertainment. Dance to live music by local and visiting performers in local lounges; attend a Native dance performance; view the award winning "Mystical Southeast Alaska" audio-visual presentation. Learn more about Ketchikan's history by attending the melodrama "Fish Pirates Daughter".

Local galleries host art show openings monthly. Other special events from theatre to sports tournaments provide additional choices for your enjoyment.

Camping

The Ketchikan area offers several camping facilities for visitors to enjoy. Camping is a favorite local pastime too- your neighbors could very well be residents out for a weekend getaway.

The US Forest Service operates the Ward Lake Recreational Area, located 8 miles north of town. Three campgrounds: Signal Creek, Last Chance and Three C's provide a total of 47 sites. Campsites are of varying size and accommodate vehicles up to 45' long; most sites handle 30' to 36' vehicles. Reservations are available for some sites.

Ketchikan's Settler's Cove Campground, operated by the Alaska State Parks system provides 14 campsites situated on salt water, 18 miles north of Ketchikan. Access is by highway, followed by a dirt road the last two miles to the campground. 13 accommodate RVs, 4 handle vehicles up to 35' long. All sites are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Private RV facilities are also available on a limited basis, but fill quickly during peak summer months. Reservations well in advance are strongly recommended.

For a truly remote getaway, consider a US Forest Service or Alaska State Parks operated recreational cabin. The cabins located on either lakefront or saltwater settings are furnished with bunks, tables, wood or oil fired stoves, and skiffs. Transportation, via floatplane or boat can be arranged through local charter companies.

The US Forest Service utilizes a nationwide reservations system on the Internet as well as a toll free phone number to reserve your campsite or cabin. Contact information for the Alaska State Parks system is also listed at left.

Attractions

The rich history and scenic beauty of Ketchikan, lays the groundwork for visits to many interesting attractions. The Tongass Historical Museum's exhibits and archival office provide a gold mine of information on early Ketchikan. Just outside, Ketchikan Creek's shoreline bends and curves past nearby Creek Street, a pedestrian thoroughfare, and the downtown area. During prohibition and in later years buildings on the street housed several bordellos. Today, restaurants, galleries and gift shops are a popular stop for visitors. During your stroll, be sure to stop in at Dolly's House Museum, home to one of the creek's most famous businesswomen, Dolly Arthur. At the mouth of the creek, The Great Alaskan Lumberjack Show showcases the skill of woodsmen competing against each other in events like log rolling and tree-climbing. Next door, the Southeast Alaska Discovery Center is an outstanding interpretive facility highlighting the Tongass National Forest. South of town, the George Inlet Cannery provides a historical perspective on the fishing industry as visitors walk through the site's original buildings and display of equipment used in the 1940's.

Flights by plane and helicopter are popular. Tour options include bear watching, trips to Misty Fjords, freight and mail runs to outlying communities, and drops at recreational areas. To enjoy the area by water, consider a guided or bare boat cruise for day trips, with or without fishing, as well as overnight stays; or choose a harbor cruise along Ketchikan's fascinating waterfront.

Shoppers desiring to purchase Alaskan hand crafts and products can be assured of authenticity by looking for the Made in Alaska, and Silver Hand symbols on items.

The Made in Alaska symbol indicates that a resident artist, craftsperson or manufacturer made the article in Alaska.

The Silver Hand emblem guarantees that the article on which it appears was hand crafted by an Alaskan Native. Wherever possible, art or craft items bearing these emblems have been made with Alaskan materials.

Transportation

Ketchikan is only a 90 minute flight by Alaska Airlines jet from Seattle. Scheduled daily jet service is available from Seattle, as well as Anchorage, Juneau, Sitka, Petersburg and Wrangell.

Local commuter air carriers connect Ketchikan with all of the outlying communities of southern Southeast Alaska, and Prince Rupert, Canada. The aircraft are called "floatplanes" because of the large floats that allow them to take off and land safely on the water. Floatplanes can land in bays and harbors to access waterfront communities and on lakes to reach remote fishing hot spots.

Ketchikan is a major cruise ship port along the Inside Passage, welcoming hundreds of thousands of visitors each year. The Alaska Marine Highway System operates a fleet of ferries connecting Ketchikan with the lower 48 states and to the rest of Alaska's Inside Passage. The scenic trip north from Bellingham, Washington takes 36 hours, from Prince Rupert, B.C. 6 hours. Convenient connections are available to Wrangell, Petersburg, Sitka, Juneau, Haines and Skagway. The Inter-Island ferry service operates daily service to and from Prince of Wales Island. Ketchikan has plenty of moorage for visiting yachts, several recreational vehicle facilities and space for private aircraft at the Ketchikan International Airport.

Ketchikan is accessible in less time, and at a lower cost than any other region of Alaska.
